

In a November 8 op-ed for the Financial Times' Swamp Notes newsletter, Rana Foroohar asks what the conventional data compiled by the US Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) and other statistical agencies can really tell us about our true wellbeing. She talked to Dimitri Papadimitriou about how the Institute plans to use its recently awarded BLS grant to improve statistics household production, "to get a more accurate sense of consumption demand, which in turn could help inform an increasingly contentious debate over things like inflation."

Read more at: https://www.ft.com/content/a6694346-9bc5-4602-a6a5-deb8f599f0b2?FTCamp=engage/CAPI/webapp/Channel_Cision//B2B